IN MEMORIAM

We, the seniors of Inverness High School dedicate our annual, the 1959 Cardinal, to the memory of Terrence Leander Mangold, who passed away November 8, 1955.

SUPERINTENDENT'S MESSAGE

YOUR SCHOOL

In the pages of this book are many pictures. Some of these record events of the year, other events of previous years, others the beloved likeness of friends and fellow students. To some extent it is a history of the school, your school.

This is your school. Its existence is promised by your state constitution and is provided by the taxpayers of your country and local community. This school is here for you, to provide you with a means of acquiring the basic knowledges so necessary to your future success.

However, the school is yours only to extent that you assume the responsibility for its continued existence. If this school is to continue being your school, its future must be guarded by you. The condition of the building, the nature of the curriculum and its influence in shaping your lives, the success of the extra-curricular activities, the reputation of the students as a body--all of these things are in your hands. This is your school, because the school is yours.

To the Class of 1959, I extend my heartiest congratulations and my best wishes for a happy future.

CLASS HISTORY

Long, long ago on September 9, 1955, nine young escapees from the eighth grade managed to sneak into the freshman class. This was a big day for us--Gary Freeman, Cheryl Zentzis, Teddy McFadden, Julie Smith, Carl White, Darla Cady, Terry Mangold, Joyce Smith and Bill Cady. Bill was a graduate of the Packer School, and a new member of the class.

A tragic death darkened the lives of the freshmen on November 8, 1955, when Terry Mangold passed away.

Despite the dire beginning, we managed to survive. We made a few changes here and there, where we felt our judgment superior to the judgment of others, and at last we had Inverness High School at our feet.

Our class strived to take part in school activities--band, chorus, basketball and others. We usually found the names of our classmates at the top of some kind of list. We had a little trouble with school work and assignments, but after a time we convinced the teachers that we were very valuable to the welfare of the entire school. After all, without us, who would there be to think up enough mischief for everyone?

Charlotte Zimbleman joined the junior class in 1957, giving us a total of four boys and five girls.

So, in 1959 we find ourselves at the end of our school career; some of the old faces having been replaced by new ones, with five of us--Gary Freeman, Teddy McFadden, Carl White, Darla Cady and Cheryl Zentzis--having gone here all twelve years.

When we look back on our school days, we find lots of pleasant memories and a few unpleasant ones, with plenty of unusual happenings on the way. We leave the past and enter the future with few worries. However, we are concerned about the future of Inverness High School--who's going to manufacture paper airplanes, spit wads, annoy the teachers, and do the many other things we have managed for twelve years? We must leave school though, so we're leaving our job to the rest of the classes. May they do as well as we, the Class of '59", have.

CLASS WILL

We, the Senior Class of 1959, in the town of Inverness, and State of Montana, feel that it is our duty to declare our followers a last will and testament since we are about to leave this school.

First, to our dear faculty, who has so faithfully served us in preparation for the future, we do bequeath a haven of rest and relaxation with peaceful dreams. To the juniors we bequeath our senior row. To the sophomores we leave our importance, patience, and wisdom. To the young and green freshman, we leave you lots of luck.

I, Joyce Smith, bequeath my ability to work and never accomplish anything to the freshman girls.

I, Darla Cady, bequeath my ability to drive to Ephriam May.

I, Cheryl Zentzis, bequeath my ability to play the piano to anyone who wants it.

I, Bill Cady, bequeath my abilities in football, basketball, and track to all the boys in Inverness High School. Stay with it boys.

I, Carl White, bequeath my ability to ram into Collin Bangs to Sonny Laber, and the Siemens brothers.

I, Ted McFadden, bequeath my centering job on the football team to anyone who wants it. Make good use of it.

I, Gary Freeman, bequeath my ability to play basketball and a few other sports to Ralph Juarez.

I, Julie Smith, bequeath my ability to eat and not gain weight to Merla Cady.

I, Charlotte Zimbelman, will my tardiness to Julia Falla, who is already doing a good job of it.

I, Joyce Smith, bequeath my ability to stay in geometry class for two years to Julia Falla.

I, Darla Cady, bequeath my ability to keep late hours to Shirley Han--make good use of it.

I, Cheryl Zentzis, bequeath my ability to get trips to Bozeman to Ann Heck and Betty McFadden.

I, Bill Cady, bequeath my ability as half-back in football to Jimmy Siemens--keep it up Jim.

I, Carl White, bequeath my size and weight to Gene Jenson and Ralph Juarez.

I, Ted McFadden, bequeath my ability in playing the trombone to Barry Kenfield and Jimmy Peterson.

I, Gary Freeman, bequeath my ability to try to study to Ronnie Mangold.

I, Julie Smith, bequeath my hot temper to anyone who can make use of it as well as I have.

Congratulations to the Class of '59

CLASS PROPHECY

It is now the spring of the year 1969. Let's call on the class of "59" and see what sort of lives they are leading.

JULIE SMITH is a top model and dress designer in New York City. She lives in a pent house on top of the Empire State Building and drives a motorcycle to work every day.

There is only one of the class left in Inverness, she is CHARLOTTE ZIMBLEMAN, and is now better known as Mrs. Kenfield. She now has an even dozen of children-all boys. She drives a Ford convertible and plans to give each of her boys one when they graduate.

GARY FREEMAN, now living in New Hampshire, owns a dairy and works as a fisherman on the side to support his high-school sweetheart (Connie) and their three curly headed little girls.

Sergeant BILL CADY, a highway patrolman is now cruising the highways of Nevada. Bill enjoys his work and goes on to say that he met his wife when she was speeding in a slow down zone.

JOYCE SMITH, another to marry the sweetheart of her high-school days, has four sets of twins. Because she is living as she always wanted-fifty miles from nowhere, it took several days to locate Joyce. When we found her, she was hoeing her nine rows of beans.

CHERYL ZENTZIS, one of the top secretaries in the U. S. is now working for the U. N. She has recently announced her engagement to the prime minister of Russia, Nikita Nteyskynev.

TED MCFADDEN, a top recording artist, is about to be married to his fifth wife. He has just brought back into popularity, the old favorite "Pink Shoelaces."

As soon as CARL WHITE was out of school he headed for Alaska where he made his fortune selling air conditioned igloos. Now a multi-millionaire, Carl is frustrated trying to spend his money.

Still trying to prove that it's a woman's world, DARLA CADY who is also a man hater, recently bought Allied Van Lines, fired all the men, and hired "girls" to replace them.

Now that the class of "59 has all been accounted for, we feel that each has been successful in his own way, and their names will always echo in the halls of Inverness High School.

King and Queen

Our Carnival this year was held on October 4, and proved to be a big success. Julie Smith and Ronnie Mangold were crowned king and queen.

Attendants were Leonette Mangold, Paulette McFadden, Dottie Han, Bill Cady, Jim Siemens, and Edward Kraft.

PROM

The Inverness Junior-Senior Prom was held in the Inverness High School gym on April 11, with music provided by the Red Lee Trio. "Showboat," the theme chosen for the prom, was depicted by a forty foot mural of a Mississippi scene.

BANQUET

The Junior-Senior Banquet was held on May 16, at the Elk's Club in Havre. The Juniors, Seniors, Teachers, and their wives were present. A delicious turkey dinner was served. Special entertainment included musical selections sung by the Junior girls. Superintendent William Gunderson, Cheryl Zentzis, President of the Senior Class, Merla Cady, President of the Junior Class, spoke at the banquet.
